THE Shadow KNOWS

Z-236

Explanatory-note-before-we-wade-into-the-mail-dept.: Mike Kaluta says our next issue is going to be a flat-out masterpiece and he is, in his words, "taking my own sweet time with it." So Frank Robbins kindly agreed to fill in with this issue's "Night of Neptune's Death." I think he's done a fine—and very interesting—job. Agree? Or disagree? Let us have your opinion. Now, to the envelope pile...

Dear Editor,

As well as being a great fan of comics, I am also very much into the Raymond Chandler/Dashiell Hammet genre of mystery, and therefore have double reason to congratulate the Kaluta-O'Neil team on the splendid job they have done in merging the two fields in The Shadow. I find that much of the flavor elements of the "hard-boiled" detective story have been expertly resurrected in these pages. The Shadow is quite a unique comic book! I am especially impressed with the talented Mike Kaluta, who seems to surpass himself with each new work. Not only is Mike's style especially suited for a period comic such as this one, but his skillful use of deep shadows captures perfectly the mood and mystery of the old pulps, and lends itself effectively to the sinister atmosphere of the stories.

Marco Aidala, Hartford, Conn.

*****

Dear Denny,

Don't overuse The Shadow! What makes The Shadow so unique is his lack of visibility. As far as I'm concerned, if The Shadow appeared in just a few panels in each story it would be in line with his mysterious character and make for an impact never seen in other comics.

Sandy Drob, Ithaca, N.Y.

Interesting idea, Sandy. What say the rest of you Shadowphiles?

*****

Denny, Mike and Berni:

You guys are great. Each issue is better than the one before. "The Kingdom of the Cobra" continues this tradition. There is never a low point in the story. The action in these stories makes all other comics look sick. The Shadow ranks high on my list of favorites. This issue was so good that I decided to try and turn my friends on to The Shadow so I waited a week so other people who wanted this issue could get it and then bought up all I could find (14) and gave them away. I don't see how any of them cannot like The Shadow as much as I do.

A fan forever,

Howard Frye, Central College, Iowa

*****

Dear Gentlemen:

Congratulations on your new endeavor which is sure to be the greatest new addition to the comics field this year. Your revival brings back the spirit and mood of The Shadow of the 1930's. Finally a company has brought back what was once the greatest in its field. I only hope that that will hold true today again as it did then. The chances look good.

Marshall F. Harris, Freeman, Vt.

*****

Dear Editor:

I have something on my mind which has been bugging me since I read your first issue. On page four, panel two, The Shadow says, "Just the usual, Shrevvy." I am not sure of the pronunciation of that name. Please explain this to me.

Daniel Schaeffer, Lexington, Mass.

*A quick poll of the experts in the room indicates that The Shadow's faithful cabby's name is pronounced Shrev-eee. Short e in the first syllable. Okay?*

*****

Denny,

The number 3 seems to be lucky for you people at DC. The third issue of Swamp Thing was the finest issue to date of that magazine and so, likewise, is issue 3 of The Shadow.

Berni's and Mike's art styles mesh together perfectly, giving both a shade of realism and a dose of the pulp-type artwork of the early-to-mid-30's.

Your story was an excellent change of pace. No mystery that the reader has to solve. Just a good old rock-em, sock-em, shoot-em-up story. Nice characterization (naturally), good dialogue, and good captions (I may be the only caption freak in fandom.)

Congratulations are due all the way around.

Andy Whitehead, Toledo, Ohio

*****

Dear Denny,

No suggestions from me—you're doing everything right! Mike Kaluta is the finest artist working in comicdom today.

If quality were the standard for setting wage-price guidelines, The Shadow would be $20 an issue, not 20c.

James Millaway, Tulsa, Okla.

*****

... And the bottom of the page is rising like the cost of a good steak. I have just enough room left to remind you of Mike Kaluta's promise—that next issue's "Night of the Ninja" will be his best work yet. And we really are interested in your opinion of the Frank Robbins version of The Shadow. Comments on this, or any other topic, are welcome at:
